

Matt Harrod
Assistant Director, Policy and Research
Indiana State Department of Agriculture

Matt Harrod is the Assistant Director, Policy and Research in the Indiana State Department of Agriculture. His responsibilities include providing quantitative and analytical research for specific ISDA program and policy issues, as well developing future policies and assessing their implications. Prior to joining the Department, Matt worked for Weaver Popcorn, where he managed the company's global raw popcorn inventory and performed contract farm production. He also has experience in branded beef sales and procurement as well as in retail fertilizer and chemical management.

Matt received his bachelor's degree in animal agribusiness and his master's in business administration in food and agribusiness from Purdue University. Matt and his wife Kristy reside in Mooresville with their four daughters.
